

It's just another picture of anywhere town USA
- tree lined streets, smiling faces on every corner, and a sense of rural peace except for the unusual happenings since the carnival settled in on the edge of town. It began with fun and laughter, popcorn and clowns, now the field is strewn with abandoned rides, the ticket taker is nowhere to be found, the sideshow wagons have fallen into disrepair. Yet from afar the light still eerily glows from one lone tent.
The marquee as you enter the grounds beckons the weary onward under its sputtering light emblazoned with

CARNEVIL OF TORTURED SOULS

A twist of carnival calliope chimes and stunted images radiate from its tattered flaps. You realize everyone else is gone except for the Freak Show.

A still night draws you through the tent flaps and beyond. A shadowy clown shows then disappears like a flitting bat. A wisp of wind washes your face as though lapped by a long gone trapeze artist still longing to perform. Sounds of laughter fade into moans. Eyes a gaze, senses heightened, heart racing then stopping...

You're about to find out what happens when the carnival comes to town but the Freak Show never leaves.....
