RYAN MUNRO

Ryan is from Florenceville, New Brunswick, Canada. Growing up, his passion was hockey, playing and eventually coaching at the minor hockey and high-school levels. All that changed to a passion for the outdoors when he moved to Jasper, Alberta, in the Canadian Rockies after mountaineering, climbing and mountain biking got into his veins. Soon after moving back to the East Coast, his love for sea kayaking began, and he took his first stroke at a certified course in 2008. Since then, he has become a Paddle Canada sea kayak Level 4 paddler and Level 2 instructor and has taken BCU coastal water and open-water navigation courses.

Ryan holds a university degree in business and pursued a professional accounting designation. Ryan has been working for Quark since 2012 during the Canadian winters. During the summers, he spends his time managing Adventure High Sea Kayaking on Grand Manan Island but has recently joined the Outward Bound Canada team as an Outdoor Education Instructor. Ryan loves to be outside whether it is in a kayak or on foot. He is excited to be in Antarctica again as he loves exploring new sites, meeting fascinating people, and continuously learning about the area.
